

Louisiana Agriculture & Forestry Today

More promises, still no action.

That's how Louisiana Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Bob Odom described the lip service given to media and agriculture leaders on a conference call hosted by USDA.

"They made a big announcement about money that was approved several months ago and they still can't tell us when it's coming. 'Some bit of time' is the best answer we got. They're telling farmers to sign up for other emergency conservation programs and they've yet to distribute those funds. Then, they dodged a question about how the money will be split among the seven states named. It's a bureaucratic mess of the worst kind," Odom criticized.

"The USDA has had more than five months to come up with the programs, publish them in the Federal Register and develop software to distribute the funds locally. Once again they're promising assistance but we won't see a dime for 'some time.' That's ridiculous. Farmers in Louisiana plant early. Banks won't lend them money until they know if there's some type of assistance money to pay off this year's debts from those crops and animals destroyed by the hurricanes. What they're promising won't make it in time."

U.S. Rep. Charlie Melancon agreed with Odom's comments about the USDA's slow course of action.

"It's not that USDA doesn't know how to do a section 32 program. Ten weeks after Hurricane Charley hit Florida, USDA was cutting the first of over $400 million in checks to Florida farmers. But here we are, nearly five months after Katrina and four months after Rita, and we still don't know how USDA intends to carve up only $250 million between seven states. That's pathetic and Louisiana farmers and producers deserve better," Melancon said.

The USDA announced a total of $2.8 billion in assistance for seven states, Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee and Texas, but only $250 million will actually go to farmers and ranchers who lost crops and livestock due to hurricanes. Again, there are no details as to how the money will be split among the states, but the $250 million will be divided into four programs: tree indemnity, hurricane indemnity, livestock and feed. There are also funds for aquaculture block grants and emergency conservation programs. No details were given.

"The hurricane indemnity probably won't help a lot of our producers who were affected by flooded fields. It's tied to crop insurance and they won't cover flooded fields. We're not sure about anything because they wouldn't give any specifics or details about the programs," Odom said. "They think we'll quiet down because this big announcement was made, but we're not going away. There are issues that need to be addressed and farmers who need help. We're not going anywhere until farmers get checks. I plan to continue working with our Congressional delegation until something is done.

"We need farmers and ranchers; they are the back bone of rural communities. Their abundant supply of safe and affordable food and fiber is what will bring people back home. This country and this state cannot survive economically or culturally without agriculture. My greatest concern is that the federal government has forgotten this."

Did You Know:

Louisiana's vast western pine forest lost millions of trees to Hurricane Rita!

Many of the felled pine trees are unsalvageable and state officials suspect conditions are ripe for the pitch-eating, or Pales' weevil, to feed on the abandoned timber.

Using the rotting pine debris as a base, the weevil can destroy entire stands of newly planted seedlings by attacking and eating the new tree's cambium layer.

To protect new spring plantings of pine seedlings from the weevil, the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry can preemptively treat more than 4 million pine seedlings at their DeRidder and Columbia tree nurseries with permethrin, (commercial name Waylay) a pesticide that kills and repels the bug.

"Because of Rita there is a lot of downed timber that will never be harvested," LDAF Reforestation Chief Charles Matherne said. "The threat of the weevil thriving in fallen trees is there so we are making the treatment available for growers who request it. We recommend the treatment if they are planting in the hurricane parishes."

The parishes targeted for the special trees include Calcasieu, Beauregard, Allen, Evangeline, Rapides, Vernon, Natchitoches, Sabine and the Florida Parishes.

The treatment will protect the delicate seedlings through the spring.

The treated pine seedlings cost $44 for a 1,000-seedling bundle.
